the Blood Tree Gavin Hill

Gavin Hill continues his sci-fi thrilling tales of adventure and intrigue that tells how it all began in his follow-up to his first novel, The Maze. In the second book of this series, The Blood Tree, an evil menace waits for the innocent to carry on the work of its creator.

Buxton Manor was born of the Maze and no one who enters that mysterious building will ever leave the same way. The rules of the game of Chance are the same wherever they are played.

There's truth in every legend which feeds the imagination. Buxton Manor was born of such a legend with secrets dark and foreboding. Legend has it that buried within the depths of this mysterious dwelling lay a gruesome history of an evil duke who built the foundation with bones of the dead.

Now this legend has come to life, one by one taking the life of those who dwell within its walls. From centuries past, bathed in hatred, comes a menace so evil it sits at the very gates of hell, patiently waiting for the next resident that walks through the doors of Buxton Manor to fill their innocent souls with vile acts to commit in its name and lay them to rest beneath the blood tree.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR:

Gavin has written several children's theme theatres, teaching Swedish children English through song and dance. Each manuscript has been recorded to a book CD, complete with songs that he and the children have written together. His anthology, 'Ten Years of the Heart,' has been ten years in the making, over one-hundred poems ranging from the world of love and romance to the backstreets that he spent his youth upon. His Maze series is only the beginning of a mystical adventure into a world beyond all worlds. Gavin has also written two horror novels and is at present working on his third..
