The Fables of Leonardo da Vinci Ed Tasca

RoseHeart Publishing is pleased to release The Fables of Leonardo da Vinci by Ed Tasca. This memorable offering of ten short stories based on the notations and ideas for fables and half-finished fables found in the back of Leonardo's famous notebooks.

The collection teaches how little stories can drive home insightful human ironies, while displaying a bit of the literary thought-processes and the humor of the great genius. It's a unique project, and a delightful way to introduce children to da Vinci and the Renaissance and accompanied by drawings in the style of that period.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR:

Ed Tasca, an award-winning humor writer, winner of the 2009 Robert Benchley Society Award for Humor, the 2006 Ojo Del Lago Humor Award, and others. Tasca's work appears in United States, Canada, and Mexico, in Esprea Magazine, Voo Doo (MIT's humor magazine), Entropy Magazine, London Free Press (Southern Ontario), Ojo del Lago (Mexico's largest English-speaking magazine), and others. Ed Tasca has often said, "People become humorists because the job market for roofers is so overcrowded." A Philly boy, Tasca was awed by the brilliance of our founding fathers, especially the man who invented Philly steaks. Ed Tasca claims he wanted to be a musician, but felt totally inadequate when he heard neighbor Frankie Avalon for the first time.
